

THE BOISE

ARTS - MUSIC - GARNETS

BEAT

DIKING - ENTERTAINMENT - POTATOES

Home About Us Authors Contact Us

← Skipper's Seafood and Chowder House In Boise Offers Sunday Seafood Special

Movies Till Dawn: '50s Violence →

Boise Author Julie Howard to Release 'Crime and Paradise' Book August 30: Interview

Posted on August 15, 2017 by Ed Simon

Alarmed, she peered into the darkness, nothing but blackness at the end of the headlights. Just a single dot of light before them, off in the distance, never coming closer no matter how long they drove toward it. Meredith looked over at Brian, wondering at this strange joke. They were nowhere. Why was he taking his family to the middle of nowhere, in the snow, at night? A shiver of apprehension went through her.

"You're going to love it here." The words raced out of Brian. "No worries about the kids. No traffic or smog. People are real in Idaho. They don't put on a show, you know? It's paradise on earth out here. Paradise on earth."

Meredith stared at the dot of light, terrified now that the lonely outpost was their home. / won't do this. She sat up straighter in her seat, ready to confront Brian, no matter the

CONTACT US

Recent Comments

- Sterling on Sterling's Pix of the Week
- amber mignault on Sterling's Pix of the Week
- Jack on Interview: Enjoying the Upcoming Total Solar Eclipse— Tips From The Boise Astronomical Society
- Ed Simon on Drowning in the Boise Brewing Scene

Categories

- Art
- Attractions
- Beer
- Boise Life
- Books
- Cocktails
- Events